“LADY” URSULA'S HUSBAND

BY
FLORENCE WARDEN

Ward, Lock & Co., Limited
TORONTO

But this statement of opinion on the part of the detective roused Lord Eastling to fury. It was with difficulty that he was restrained by his companion from rushing back to the platform to make another frantic search, and from making known to the officials that he was engaged in a man hunt.

The persuasive voice at his ear went on:

"Now, then, my lord, pull yourself together. You mustn't lose your head now, whatever you do."

"I must find him, stop him," panted Lord Eastling. "I can't let him get away—with her. Don't you see that I can't?"

"Listen, my lord. He'll get away, be sure of that. If you'll be guided by me, we'll get on his track in no time."

Rather because he had no plan of his own than because he trusted to that of the detective, Lord Eastling listened, as he was asked to do. After all, Redding was his only friend; without him, the pair would have been allowed to get away at their ease, and the whole terrible story of Paul Payne's antecedents would have been unknown to any member of the family whom he had duped. No longer was it possible to have any doubts about the guilt of his newly made brother-in-law, for did not his disappearance betray him?

"What am I to do?" he stammered. He was amenable to influence at last and Redding took him by the arm, led him out of the crowd, and opening the door of a taxicab, invited the viscount to jump in.

Lord Eastling drew back, startled. But a nod and an expressive look from the detective half-reassured him, and he got into the vehicle obediently.

Then Redding got in beside him, gave him an expressive wink in answer to his astonished protest, and said:

"We must let them think we've given up the chase."

"What?" stammered the bewildered Eastling.

"Tomkinson saw me, and he saw me speak to you, and I expect he made up his mind to get by the next train. He must leave England, that's certain. He won't want a scandal till he's made himself safe."

"A scandal!" faltered the young man.

"Yes. There would have been a scandal if you'd met him in the train and tried to drag him out or anything of that sort. Now he can't afford that, nor can we. For, after all, he may be really your brother-in-law by this time, you know."

This most distasteful thought was indeed ever present to the viscount.

"That won't do much good," he said fiercely, "for Lady Ursula certainly won't acknowledge a criminal as her husband."

"You mustn't reckon on anything where a lady is concerned," said the officer dryly.

"But where are we driving to?"

"We're only taking a turn to fill up time. We know they're not gone by the boat train, but there's one in an hour, the three-fifteen, gets to Dover at eight minutes past five, stops at Priory Station. He's very likely to go by that, and to wait in the town for the ten o'clock boat tonight. Anyhow, that's the one you must go by, in the hope of catching him on the platform."

"You mustn't reckon on anything where a lady is concerned," said the officer dryly.

"We're only taking a turn to fill up time. We know they're not gone by the boat train, but there's one in an hour, the three-fifteen, gets to Dover at eight minutes past five, stops at Priory Station. He's very likely to go by that, and to wait in the town for the ten o'clock boat tonight. Anyhow, that's the one you must go by, in the hope of catching him on the platform."

"You may rely upon me to keep watch on this side, but it will be for you to deal with him, my lord, for I'll wager you will come face to face with him before twelve hours are up."

He spoke with so much confidence that the young man felt a slight increase of it on his side.

"You have found out something," he said.

"Not much, but well, yes, something. I had a few words with one of our men while you were on the platform, and I found out that you had missed him that time."

"Why didn't you tell me?" raged the young man. "I'm not to be treated like a child. The honor of my sister is concerned. I have to act at once."

"Yes, my lord, but it would have done no good to have made a scene in the station. It would have been a terrible thing for the lady. No. Wait till you can get him within four walls, and then—why, you can let fly."

"By—I will," said the young man, fiercely.

He ended by placing himself unconsciously in the hands of his mentor, and by the three-fifteen that afternoon he started for Dover.

He saw no sign of his sister or Paul Payne before he started, or at Dover, and this fact made him uneasy, and doubtful whether he had done right in taking so implicitly the advice given him by Redding.

But the crisis was so momentous, he felt himself so entirely unable to evolve a plan of action equal to the needs of it, that he had no choice.

W. N. U. 1190

By the detective's direction he had telegraphed to Wintersand, saying that he was going on to Paris, leaving it to be understood that he was traveling with his sister and her husband.

As he sat back in his corner, he thought over all the events of the day, and pondered upon the situation. Especially did he linger anxiously over that injunction of Redding's to get hold of the jewellery which Paul Payne had given to Lady Ursula as a wedding present. The detective would not say why he wanted so particularly to see these, but now that Lord Eastling's eyes had been opened to the character of Paul Payne, it was not difficult to imagine the most sinister reasons for the officer's curiosity.

The viscount took a sharp lookout at Dover, at the hotel where he stayed some hours, of his way to the boat, and again on the opposite shore, from the boat, the arrival. But as it was now long since dark, his opportunities as an amateur detective were but small; and although he felt more anxious than ever, he was not entirely without hope that the fugitives might be on the train after all.

At Paris, in the darkness of the early hours of a cold December morning, as he tumbled out of his compartment, shivering and miserable, Lord Eastling was almost without hope as the result of a journey which began to appear to him in the light of a wild-goose chase.

Then, suddenly, most unexpectedly, he caught the flutter of a long, loose black cloak on a tall, erect female figure, and he breathed a sigh of relief which was almost a groan.

It was his sister, Lady Ursula.

Long before he could come up with her, she had got into a closed cab, and Paul Payne had shut himself in with her.

But Lord Eastling, now completely reassured, chartered a second cab, and a happy-go-lucky English sovereign into the hand of the astonished driver, promised him a second if he kept in sight of his destination the next morning.

The first cab stopped at a quiet hotel, the choice of which proved that Paul Payne knew his Paris, and avoided the haunts of the casual tourist, both English and American.

By the time Lord Eastling had got out and paid the driver the promised handsome fare, the luggage—very modest for a bride, had been taken in doors, and the viscount followed the man who was carrying it.

At a door on the first floor he stopped, and when it was opened, Lord Eastling saw Paul Payne helping Lady Ursula to get into a closed cab with the tender affection the occasion demanded. The sight enraged him. He dashed forward into the room, and faced them both, silent, his eyes ablaze.

His sister was the first to see him, and a little cry of amazement, which was absolutely unmixt with alarm, escaped her lips.

"Tom!" cried she.

And, without stopping to inquire why he had come, she ran forward to kiss him. It was the action of a happy woman, of a woman whose sky is absolutely serene, who fears no ill, absorbed in her new-found happiness. He looked down into the clear blue eyes, and his own filled with tears as he gazed at her. Then he flung his arms round her, and murmured hoarsely:

"Thank God, thank God I've got you! Thank God, I've got you safe!"

Even then she had no suspicion; her pure mind was incapable of harboring a disloyal thought, and she saw in her brother's almost theatrical embraces and exclamations nothing but a source of surprise.

"Why, Tom, why didn't you come with us, if you wanted to be with us so badly?" she asked with a happy smile, and then suddenly from her countenance when, on turning to share her amusement with her husband, she saw that Paul was standing stiff and straight, at a little distance, with a frown of marked annoyance on his face.

Lord Eastling's eyes met those of Paul.

"I want to speak to you, Payne," he said, "by yourself."

He had disengaged himself from his sister, who fell back now, for the first time curious and disturbed.

"What is it, Tom?" she cried gently. "Nobody ill at home? Oh, dear, papa?"

"No, no, nothing's all right. Don't worry yourself. Go into the next room, and let us talk."

"But, why, why? What can you have to say that I may not hear? You are treating me as if I were a child. Tom, say what you have to say. Paul, I am sure, has secrets from me."

She turned, with a smile of ineffable beauty, towards Paul. But he was not looking at her, his eyes were fixed steadily on his brother-in-law.

"Go into the next room, dear," he said without looking at her.

Good Milk

The essential factors in producing a clean, safe milk are: Clean, healthy cows, kept in clean, light, well-ventilated stables; stables so constructed as to be easily cleaned; a clean, well-drained barnyard; clean utensils, thoroughly sterilized; clean, healthy milkers that milk with dry hands; a small top milking pail; immediate cooling of the milk to 50 degrees F. or lower; storage of milk at a low temperature until delivered; a separate house for handling milk; an abundant supply of pure water.

Care of Dairy Cattle

Change of Feed Does Not Appear to Affect Percentage of Butter

Fat

The best dairy cows, as a rule, carry but little surplus flesh, and consequently are unable to stand in comparison to cold as the best animals do, so they must be warmly stabled to give the best results. If a large part of the feed supplied to a dairy cow has to be used for heat production there is but a small amount available for milk production. It will probably pay much better to heat very cold water, bringing it up to somewhere near body temperature, by the use of a rough, cheap fuel, than it will to have the cow warm the water supplied her by the consumption of valuable foodstuffs.

A change of feed makes no difference in the per cent of butterfat which the cow puts into her milk. The richness of the milk is the individuality of the cow, and you can't change it by changing the feed. If this could be done then people would feed Holstein cows a ration so that they would give milk just as rich as Jerseys and Guernseys. Different individuals of the same breed of cows give milk of different richness. For instance, two Jersey cows standing side by side in the same barn and fed the same ration, cared for in exactly the same way, give different tests. One of them will give 4.2 per cent milk, while the other will give 6.5 per cent milk, so that feed, speaking generally, has nothing to do with the test. It might be that if you would change the feed from dry feed to corn silage all at once that temporarily there would be a change, and the cows would give either richer or poorer milk, but if the change is made gradually there would be no variation in the milk test. But when the cow is used to her corn silage rations and gets back to her limit she showed the same percentage of butterfat that she did ordinarily.

German Butler

When General Smuts, aged forty-five, one of the conquerors of German South-West Africa, has annexed German East Africa, the Huns will be short of the last of their extensive colonies made colonies. The German press says that Germany will get them back, and the Congo as well, in exchange for Belgium, Wall, Britain, France, Russia, Italy, Canada and New Zealand, not to forget gallant little Belgium herself (and the British fleet in the bargain), will have something to say on that point—just now—and permanently, too.

Germany is not alone in her colonies are rid of their Prussian oppressors. We are in possession, and everyone, except the Hun, is pleased with the prospect. Sea power counts. London Daily Mail.

Saw "Safety First" Film

C.P.R. Officials Viewed Silent Drama to Stimulate Movement

A realistic moving picture film in the interests of the Safety First Movement was recently displayed in a specially fitted car at Windsor Station before Vice-President Bury and a number of C.P.R. officials.

The film was produced by Mr. Marston A. Dow, general safety agent, New York Central Lines, and tells the story of a railroad man, Jack Foster, whose carelessness endangered the happiness of his wife and home until his friend, Jim Stevens, a booster for the Safety First, convinces him by demonstrating awful examples that it is worse to gamble with life than to gamble in any other way. One man loses his leg, and other accidents are realistically portrayed in an exhibition at the Safety Rally to which Jim Stevens takes Jack Foster—such as the shopman who loses an eye through not wearing goggles, the carpenter losing a finger while working at a buzz saw without the guard, the brakeman being run over while running between moving cars, the engine man being killed while boarding the footboard of an engine in motion. Particularly impressive is the picture of a collision due to slowness in flagging.

In order to promote the Safety First Movement in Canada, Mr. Bury has secured a copy of the film, which will be offered to moving picture houses at divisional and other important railroad points along the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Note and Comment

A good name may be better than riches, but it is understood that J. Wesley Allison is not of that opinion.

Evidence is accumulating as to what happens when the irresistible force of conditions as they are, assaults an immovable mind. A while ago it was peace with huge indemnity that was discussed in Berlin, now it is peace with honor. This denotes satisfactory, although gradual progress towards peace at any price.

No people in history have ever thought that they were great enough to fight the world, that the world did not rise up and strike them down.

Years ago, Herr Bebel, the great German socialist leader, described the German people as being drunk with victory, and he added that only crushing defeat would sober them. We think they are beginning to have that "next morning" feeling already.

If recruiting in Quebec is satisfactory to Gen. Sam Hughes, he must be tickled to death with the results in other provinces.

At the end of the present fiscal year, Great Britain's net national debt will be $14,000,000,000. This is about a sixth part of the national wealth.

The German Chancellor thinks it would be foolish to attack Canada. He has had one of his lucid moments. It would.

Several Dutch newspapers declare that there can be no other explanation of the deliberate attacks on neutral shipping than the determination of Germany to destroy as many ships as it can, so that when the war is over and the German merchant vessels are released, they will find no competition to hamper them in seizing the commerce of the world. According to this view there is method in that apparent madness.

The fact that there is only enough coffee in Germany to last six weeks is not so awful after all. The German chemists will, no doubt, be able to find something just as good, like that made in Grand Rapids, by Post.

The crew of a shattered Zeppelin which had been busy all night dropping bombs on sleeping non-combatants, was rescued from the sea and warily clothed and fed by a British patrol boat. There is something in the British which must be a sore puzzle to a nation which triumphantly announces the sinking of another hospital ship filled with wounded, and in this instance, at anchor,

At last Uncle Sam appears to be coming around to the conviction that he can't save his face by turning the other cheek.

What the Belgians receive from Britain and other countries by way of relief is about equal to the $96,000,000 in money and goods which Germany annually squeezes out of that unfortunate people.

It was the intention and expectation of the kaiser and the German general staff to take Verdun in four days. More than eight weeks have passed since the battle began, and the fall of Verdun seems to be no more imminent now than it was eight weeks ago, and at least six German army corps have been destroyed in the attempt. A tremendous price has been paid for Verdun in advance and the goods are not yet delivered.

The whole Dominion is convinced of the want of a thorough canvas for recruits and putting it on an intelligent basis, the whole of Canada, except Quebec and the Borden government.

Therefore recruiting is being done in the old expensive uphill manner, and officers are resorting to all kinds of devices to get men and excite interest and attract crowds.

When prohibition comes licenses stop. A license to sell liquor is more than a right to sell during a certain period. It is the creation of a monopoly right during that period. The Province has insisted that the granting of the license be made yearly, and there is no more right to claim a renewal of license than there is to claim a right to a new lease when the present one expires.

Every investment made during the last ten years in liquor selling has been highly speculative.

Premier Scott declares that the profits of the trade during those years has been sufficient to pay for all capital invested and afford good dividends and provide a sinking fund. If this is so the community as a whole owes the trade no debt. If the expectation of renewal is not a property then there is no claim for compensation. If the future license is not a property, there is no confiscation or damage.

The proposal for compensation is really a proposal for endowment. It is not a proposal to give money for rights or property surrendered. It is simply a proposal to take public moneys and confer them as a permanent benefit in the form of a capital sum upon persons who give in return no service, surrender no right and hand over no property. To speak of compensation under such terms is a misuse of language. The monopoly enjoyed has far outweighed any inconvenience caused by uncertainty of renewal. The frightful desolation which has been connived at by the trade as a whole has surely levied upon the public treasury a persistent drain which has been tolerated long enough.

We cannot compensate the victims of the trade.

We will not endow the beneficiaries of the trade.

I OWE MY HEALTH

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Washington Park, Ill.—"I am the mother of four children and have suffered with female trouble, backache, nervous spells and the blues. My children's loud talking and romping would make me so nervous I could just tear everything to pieces and I would ache all over and feel so sick that I would not want anyone to talk to me at times. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills restored me to health and I want to thank you for the good they have done me. I have had quite a bit of trouble and worry but it does not affect my youthful looks. My friends say 'Why do you look so young and well?' I owe it all to the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies."

—Mrs. Roy, 3701 N. Moore Avenue, Washington Park, Illinois.

We wish every woman who suffers from female troubles, nervousness, backache or the blues could see the letters written by women made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If you have any symptom about which you would like to know write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice given free of charge.

FINDS IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS A CURE FOR HIS RHEUMATISM

States Out of His Own Experience That Dodd's Kidney Pills Are a Sure Relief From Pain.

Greenfield, Queen's Co., N.S.—(Special.) "To anyone who suffers from rheumatism I say: 'Take Dodd's Kidney Pills.' They will be sure to give you a release from pain." This is the message of Cornelius Hirtle, a well known farmer living near here. Mr. Hirtle suffered from rheumatism for four years and found a cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I was in bad shape for four years," Mr. Hirtle says in giving his experience. "My back and hips troubled me so much that I was not able to do much without suffering. I also had stiffness in the joints, my muscles cramped and I felt heavy and sleepy after meals. I had a bitter taste in my mouth, especially in the morning. My appetite was fitful and I was often dizzy."

"I suffered from shortness of breath, I was often dizzy and I was depressed and low spirited."

"I took six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they did me so much good that I am recommending them to all my friends. They are better than any doctor."

Every one of Mr. Hirtle's symptoms was a symptom of kidney disease. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him.

A Strange Career

Irish Born, He Fought the British Till the Present War

The London Standard publishes a remarkable story sent by a correspondent "upon which rests the responsibility for its accuracy."

On Saturday the French government announced the death of Jean Kleber, killed in circumstances providing a fitting end to a career full of romance and tragedy. His real name was known only to a small circle of friends. He was the son of a wealthy Belfast merchant and received a good education, graduating with honors at Trinity college, Dublin, and studying in Germany. He served some years in the Foreign Legion in North Africa and was one of the party accompanying Major Marchand on the Fashoda mission.

Two years later he took service with the Boers and went through the whole of the war, subsequently escaping to France, after refusing to surrender his command under the terms of the Vereeniging treaty.

Two of his best known achievements were the capture of Lord Methuen and the cutting up of Gen. Garter's force at Stormberg.

After the Boer war "Kleber" returned to the French service, but the secret in all his career was that he was a Frenchman. He had been in Germany and Britain caused him to seek service with the Kaiser's army. His offer was accepted but in 1911 the threat of a German attack on France led to his retirement from the German service. On the outbreak of the present war "Kleber" rejoined the French army.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. L. Isbell, Kingston, Ont., writes: "I am using Baby's Own Tablets and find them good as advertised. They are certainly a wonderful remedy for little ones." Mrs. Isbell's testimony is like that of thousands of other mothers. Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets she will use nothing else for her little ones. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Catching Flies by Electricity

A new device for catching flies is being added to the equipment of a number of hotels in preparation for the summer season. It consists of an electric motor, which draws the flies up by a strong current to a pipe. Molasses or moistened sugar is smeared on the edges to draw them to the vicinity. As the flies alight upon the pipe, a strong suction seizes them and quickly drops them into a steel cage in the bottom of the pipe. This machine has demonstrated an ability to capture over a hundred flies a minute. It will clear a fly infested room in a few minutes and can be easily carried from one room to another and operated from the plug supplying the current for electric light.

The Beauty of a Clear Skin.—The condition of the liver regulates the condition of the blood. A disordered liver causes impurities in the blood and these show themselves in blemishes on the skin. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills in acting upon the liver act upon the blood and clear the complexion. The blood and clear healthy skin will follow intelligent use of this standard medicine. Ladies, who will fully appreciate this prime quality of these pills, can use them with the certainty that the effect will be most gratifying.

Flowers for Children

Educators are appreciating the refining influence of flowers on children. More and more, the schools are taking up school gardening; civic committees are trying to get the cooperation of the children for a city beautiful. If children are allowed to help in the home garden, they will not only help make, but help keep a home beautiful.

Children should be given flowers that are sure to be a success, lest they get discouraged with frequent disappointments. Only grown-ups know that to have a garden is to wage constant war against cut-worms and bugs and insects. Let the children have easily grown things—nasturtiums, corn flowers, California poppies, four o'clocks, larkspur, sweet alyssum, candytuft, verbena, calliopis, varieties with a long blooming period; and let them cut the flowers to suit themselves. One plant of each kind is only disappointing; give them a satisfying quantity—the cost is small, and the reward great.

Big Commonwealth Army

300,000 Australians Will be Under Arms Next June

One of the first official acts of the new prime minister of Australia, Wm. M. Hughes, has been an announcement that a fresh army will be furnished by the Commonwealth and that this army will number 50,000 men. "This further contribution," said Mr. Hughes, "will bring the total number of men supplied by Australia by next June to something like 200,000 men. It is to be understood that the principle of voluntary enlistment is to be adhered to. No requests have been made to the Commonwealth by the imperial government for more men. The offer was quite spontaneous. I have not the slightest doubt that the necessary men will be forthcoming. These will form new units, and are independent of the quota of 9,500 a month necessary for reinforcements. A government appeal will be made to every man in Australia within the military age group based on the recent war census—that is, single men from 18 to 44 years.

Fiendish Scheme of Austrian Airmen

These packages, when analyzed, were found to contain millions of germs of highly contagious diseases.

"Hoot! That's nothing," was the reply. "My ancestors have been entitled to bare legs for the last 2,000 years."

HOW I CURED MY EYES

This Free Prescription Did It.

"My eyes were in a terrible state; I could hardly stand it. They were red and inflamed, felt as though they had sand in them. They would ache and burn dreadfully and caused incessant headaches. I could hardly read at all. After wearing my glasses my eyes felt strained and overworked. By chance I met a man whose eyes had bothered him the same way. He gave me the following prescription, which he said had cured him, and had enabled him to discard his glasses: 5 grains of Bor-Ac in 2 ounces of water. Use as an eye-bath by means of an eye-cup three or four times daily—either if convenient."

"This healing, cooling, soothing lotion does not smart or burn, and is absolutely harmless. Your druggist can fill this prescription, or the Veinase Drug Co. of Toronto can fill it for you."

"If you try it I am sure you will be just as enthusiastic over it as I am. Cut this out so you will always have the prescription."

His Debt to His Nation

There is no more reason to leave the paying of his debt to his nation to each man's conscience than there is in leaving the paying of his debt to his bank to each man's conscience. The volunteer system is unsound both from the military and from the civic point of view. It is inevitably unjust and demoralizing. It is unwelcome, as the failure of Lord Derby's moderate and conciliatory plan has just proved again in England and in the midst of a great war. For the sake of American youth and for the sake of the nation, we ought to adopt universal compulsory military training and service now, while peace permits us to do it deliberately, consciously, not as a hasty bit of expediency, but on principles of democratic service and unfettered patriotic devotion.—Chicago Tribune.

A Noble Example

An English Mother Who Has Given Seventeen Sons to the Army

Surely there would never have been and need to introduce compulsory military service if every British mother had followed the example of Mrs. Davies, of Church Stretton, Salop, England.

This good lady, the widow of a soldier, has given no fewer than seventeen sons to the army, of whom fourteen were actually on active service with the colors on September 15th, 1914, six weeks only after the outbreak of the war.

Another patriotic mother, Mrs. Jones of Kyverdale Road, Stamford Hill, gave her three triplet sons and a fourth son to the army.

Then there is Mrs. Potter, a Portsmouth, Eng., widow, aged eighty-three, who has been awarded a prize locally for being the head of the family with the most members in the fighting services. Sixteen of her grandsons are in the army or the navy, and the husbands of four of her granddaughters are on active service, making twenty for her descendants altogether fighting for King and country. In addition, two other grandsons, now dead, were in the navy.

NERVOUS DISEASES IN THE SPRING

Cured by Toning the Blood and Strengthening the Nerves

It is the opinion of the best medical authorities, after long observation, that nervous diseases are more common and more serious in the spring than at any other time of the year. Vital changes in the system, after long winter months, may cause much more trouble than the familiar spring weakness and weariness from which most people suffer as the result of indoor life, in poorly ventilated, and often overheated buildings. Official records prove that in April and May neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, epilepsy and other forms of nerve troubles are at their worst, and that then, more than any other time, a blood-making, nerve-strengthening tonic is needed.

The antiquated custom of taking purgatives in the spring is useless, for the system really needs strengthening, while purgatives only gallop through the bowels, leaving you weaker. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine, for they actually make the new, rich, red blood that feeds the starved nerves, and thus cures the many forms of nervous disorders. They cure also such other forms of spring troubles as headaches, poor appetite, weakness in the limbs, as well as remove unsightly pimples and eruptions. In fact they unfailingly bring strength and brightness to weakened and depressed men, women and children.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mark Twain once desired to borrow a book from a neighbor of his, but was told that, though he might refer to it in the library with pleasure, the books were never allowed to leave his house. Not long after the neighbor asked Mark Twain to lend him his lawn sprinkler. He was informed that the latter never allowed the sprinkler to leave his own garden, but that he was quite welcome to make use of it, if he liked, on the lawn of the humorist.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than at all other seasons put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has discovered Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Dr. J. C. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The Poor Man's Friend.—Put up in small bottles that are easily portable and sold for a very small sum. Its cheapness and the varied uses to which it can be put make it the poor man's friend. No dealer's stock is complete without it.

In the year ending with March, 1915, the profit on the sale of silver at the Royal Mint in England, was just under $22,500,000. As that period included only two-thirds of a year of war, the profit during the current twelve months will presumably be considerably larger.

An old Scotch crofter, when giving evidence before the crofters' commission, admitted that, while he was the owner of three cows, "the beasties were as thin as Pharaoh's lean kine." The chairman, thinking to corner old Kenneth, asked him to say how lean Pharaoh's kine were. Even a seventeenth century diviner would have wanted a day or two to think this over. But Kenneth answered at once: "They were sea lean that they c'd only be seen in a dream."—London Opinion.

Miller's Worm Powders are par excellence the medicine for children who are found suffering from the ravages of worms. They immediately alter the stomachic conditions under which the worms subsist and drive them from the system, and at the same time they are tonic in their effect upon the digestive organs, restoring them to healthful operation and ensuring immunity from further disorders from such a cause.

Barbed wire is being exported from the United States at the rate of six million tons a year, and at £2.85 a ton more than before the war.

The Internal Nerves

The Nerves Which Drive the Machinery of the Body—the Heart, the Lungs, the Digestive Organs.

You prick your finger and know that it is the nerves which carry the painful sensation to the brain. You move your hand, and realize that the idea of movement started in your mind. But did you ever think that every beat of your heart and every breath of air taken into your lungs is dependent on a constant supply of nerve force?

It is the internal or sympathetic nerves which drive the machinery of the body, and from their derangement or exhausted condition arises weakness of the stomach, feeble action of the heart, or inactivity of liver and bowels.

When nerve force fails every organ of the body becomes more or less deranged. Indigestion, sleeplessness, headaches, irritability and nervousness are some of the first indications.

You lose energy and ambition, find your work a drudgery, and grow weak and listless. As time goes on you become more and more helpless, until nervous prostration or collapse bring you to the sick bed, and long months are often necessary for the restoration of the exhausted nervous system.

Even in this extreme condition Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will usually cure if it is used persistently, but how much wiser it is to heed the warning in the early stages and keep the nerve force at high-water mark.

No restorative has ever proven its worth in so many thousands of cases as has Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. What it has done for others it will do for you under similar conditions. By forming new, rich blood it nourishes the starved and depleted nerves back to health and vigor, and thereby overcomes the cause of weakness and diseases of the nerves.

Old Age

What is the sign of old age? Collier's Weekly recently ventured the suggestion that it is the wide gap between "I wish" and "I will." The man who has given up the idea of making his dreams come true is on the way to old age.

Here is another angle: Life has a lot of zest and interest to us in youth. We look forward to the next mail or the next day with pleasurable anticipation. When we no longer look forward and lose our interest in the human spectacle, then youth had faded. It isn't a matter of years, but of spirit.

Excellent music was furnished and refreshments were served during the evening. At the usual hour the party broke up, everyone having enjoyed the evening.

The fire scare has caused the people to fire-guard the town. It's best to be on the safe side.

Miss Ross, teacher of View Lund School is spending her Easter vacation at Camrose and other points.

Everyone seems to be in the working mood these days. Wouldn't it be advisable to have a "cleaning up day," boys?

Messrs. Bedford and Doyle left last week for Kerrobert, where they have secured lucrative positions in that district. We trust that winter will find them in Kerry.

Did you notice Roy's broadened smile. I wonder if it means a "lean to."

The reception at Sleepy Hollow on Saturday last was a grand success. Bowls of red and white tulips were used in the drawing room and tango tulips on the tea table. The guests were entertained during the tea hour by charming solos.

Bill Schon, like Willard grown tired of the public life and stage is enjoying life on the homestead.

A few choice settings of turkey eggs may be had at Frank Cochran's.

The business at the livery has changed hands. We regret the loss of the members of the former company out of our midst, but extend a welcoming hand to the new owner, Mr. Howard and his family.

Gardening has begun. Harold has planted his post holes. If the crop is a success Turner says he is trying it next season.

THE BIG EASTERN THEATRE OF WAR

FAR EASTERN THEATRE OF WAR

NOW PLAYING GAME OF WORRYING THE TURK

Some of the Hardest Fighting in the War Has Occurred in the Far East, Where Russian Troops Have Been Doing Good Work in Keeping Turks Engaged

The Caucasian theatre, while it has been seen of the hardest fighting of the war, has remained one of the least understood. Geographically it has seemed remote from all the other scenes of major operations—more in the nature of a little war by itself. The average layman when asked to locate the region places it rather indefinitely "somewhere in Western Asia."

The Caucasus for a great many years has been Russia's outpost from which gradually she has extended her influence over Northern Persia and the potentially wealthy area of Eastern Asia Minor. The lofty mountains, on the other hand, have been Turkey's barrier against encroaching Moscovites, held with desperation against an ever-increasing pressure from the north.

The first effort of the Ottoman army when it was projected into the war was directed through the Caucasus against Russia. A force based on the fortified city of Erzerum sought to clear the frontier and capture Kars, the metropolis of the Russian coasted district. The column penetrated to the very outskirts of Kars, and for a few days there were rumors of its capture, but the Russians succeeded in the end in making the retreat, driving back the Turks to the frontier and beyond.

All of the first winter of the war fighting of the utmost acuity occurred in the mountains, where the armies surged back and forth in snow that at times reached a depth of 20 feet. At least 200,000 men were engaged in a series of desperate conflicts that lasted until early in April, when the Turkish army, after a stalemate, withdrew a good part of their forces to meet the Anglo-French demonstration against the Dardanelles. The German and Austrian offensive, which was organized at the same time and began May 1st with the battle of Donauje, at the same time saved the situation by compelling the Russians to end their activities in the Caucasus and concentrate every available man and gun in Galicia just at the time when the opening of the Turkish front might have permitted a decisive victory. The conditions of the campaign have prevented until recently the resumption of the campaign with anything like adequate numbers and equipment.

Simultaneously with the beginning of the drive on the Aras the Russian opened a campaign against the southern shores of Lake Van. Increased their activity in Persia. Perhaps no better illustration of the spirit of co-operation in the allied war effort can be found than this widespread attack on the Turks. It will be noted that the resumption of Russian activity against the Porte came just at the time when the Anglo-French pressure at the Dardanelles was withdrawn, far from having an opportunity for rest and recuperation after the struggle on Gallipoli the Ottoman army was forced almost over night to prepare to meet a strong and determined offensive on its opposite frontier and over a front, including three active or more than three hundred miles. This was Russia's contribution to the game of "worrying the Turk."

What Canada Spends

Enormous Total of War Expenditures For the Present Year

"The expenditure for war purposes in Canada will aggregate $600,000,000 within the present calendar year," according to the estimate of the March letter of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

This total exceeds anything dreamed of when the work of making ammunition was undertaken in this country. The letter adds: "The output of ammunition, which at the commencement of the present year was valued at $30,000,000 per month, is steadily increasing as a result of greater efficiency. That still heavier demands will be made upon our industries is foreshadowed by the announcement that at the request of the government the banks are preparing to provide a further credit of from fifty to seventy-five millions for imperial purposes. It is hoped that this will result in the placing of orders of at least $150,000,000 to this country."

City Conveniences in Country Homes
Nowhere is the luxury of a bath more highly appreciated than in a farm home, to which one comes covered with dust from a day in the fields. There is no more difficulty in providing for this luxury in a country home than there is in the city.

A windmill, a gas engine or electric power will put the water supply under pressure, to be drawn at will from taps inside the house. Hard and soft water under pressure in the home means, too, a saving of steps and time in the house and avoids the exposure involved where water cannot be obtained without going out of doors.

Hunt for Pirate's Treasure

Ill-gotten Loot Believed to be Planted Off Coast of Labrador

Declaring that he has positive knowledge of a cache of treasures in the North Atlantic near the Canadian coast, Milton McMillan, wealthy "salvager of fortune," is preparing an expedition by sea to hunt for the gold. Associated with him are Captain Ward, an aged seafarer, and two wealthy citizens of Los Angeles.

Mr. McMillan, who, eight years ago brought to the notice of some American scientists, the archeological value of the relics of San Nicholas island, talks freely of the proposed treasure hunt until he is interrogated regarding the exact location of the island, when he is silent.

He says the gold and jewels—hidden by a pirate chief, of course, a la Stevenson—is secreted on a mushroom-shaped island, good ship, the coast of Labrador. His faith in the theory that he will bring to light of the 18th century the hoards of the island is shown by his extensive buying of supplies for the trip, which will be made via the Panama Canal.

He says this island is just one ledge of hundreds of islands, good ship, the deep, altitude 300 feet, 350 feet long and 150 feet wide. The location is safe for navigation, near to the island only two months out of the year, he says, because of the storms which visit those latitudes.

The sea captain, Ward, whose grandfather roamed the deep in the early part of the 19th century, brought the story of pirate wealth hidden in the reef.

Captain Ward says he got the word from his grandfather, who in turn received it from his grandfather, that one of the blood-thirsty robbers of the sea, who was a pirate, hid his booty during colonial days in his booty of years on this island and then had to sail away and die somewhere.

Haphazard Recruiting

Industries Suffering Unnecessarily Through the Present Method

The following memorial to the Dominion government was passed by the Hamilton Recruiting League, March 7, 1915.

Whereas, this Dominion is engaged in a war involving the very existence of British institutions—a war that calls for the most rigid economy of men and means—a war that can be successfully concluded only by the fullest utilization of all our resources.

Whereas, the present voluntary system there is great waste of the nation's resources.

The Hamilton Recruiting League humbly begs the government of Canada to appoint a commission for the purpose of:

(1) Taking a census of all men in the Dominion from 18 years of age and upward, specifying those married and unmarried.

(2) Classifying the men according to their occupations or their fitness or preference for certain kinds of work.

(3) Classifying the industries with a view to the selection of the ultimate elimination of such as are non-essential to the welfare of the country or are not economic factors.

(4) It being understood that the foregoing is urged with a view to the immediate application of some just and comprehensive system of draft whereby the men necessary to complete the Canadian Expeditionary forces may be readily secured.

The Hamilton Recruiting League has been a very active agency in the enlistment of soldiers. It may fairly claim a share of the credit that is due to Hamilton for the present contribution to the forces of the empire.

From its intimate knowledge of the workings of the voluntary system, the League has reached by conclusion that for Canada to continue its present methods would be highly detrimental to the welfare of the country.

Canada has without doubt attracted to the colors a very superior class of men who are actually the best principles of patriotism and duty.

Very many of these have left positions of great importance for which competent men cannot be found.

Almost every industry and family is suffering unnecessary loss through the present haphazard method of enlistment.

The first class of men who should be called upon for service are the unmarried fit men who could be released from their present occupations without serious loss to anyone.

Probably this class would suffice to meet the needs of the empire as it is pledged to supply.

The country could thus fulfil its obligations without serious loss of revenue or serious disturbance of its internal economy.

A system of wise selection should appeal strongly to every loyal member of the empire. It is the duty of the spirit of true liberty for which the empire is fighting. That liberty for which a man will not fight is not liberty. A man who is not free from the duty of defending the state.

It is not suggested that the proposed system of selection should be permanent. Extraordinary need justifies extraordinary measures.

It is hoped that all who are in sympathy with the above memorial will exert their utmost influence to further its objects.

The Home Town

The Home Town the Best Investment a Farming Community Can Have

One Sunday afternoon two tourists, a man and his wife, were passing through a small town in Lincolnshire, commenting the while on the prosperous look of the place. When right in front of one of the homelike residences, a fire of their automobiles blew out. The town was hot, the travellers were tired and dusty. Changing a tire is no easy task at night, but on a hot Sunday afternoon in the middle of the winter of a strange town, the job was a real tragedy for two tattered and grimy travellers, having a fair degree of pride.

Operations had not been carried far before the owner of the homelike place sauntered out, inquired of the travellers where they were from, where they were going and otherwise made himself agreeable. He invited the lady tourist to come up to the porch with his wife, where there was an easy chair, cool shade and an abundance of ice water.

After the fire had been changed, the tourists were invited to wash up and to rest and refresh themselves.

Can you imagine a more appreciated courtesy? This man, the owner of the homelike place in the little town, was the leading merchant and his attention to the strangers was nothing more nor less than his everyday business policy.

He told the tourists all about the little town and the prosperous farming community that surrounded it, and upon which it depended for support. He said that he knew all the members of every farmer's family within his trade district; that he had visited every house and he made it a practice to do so frequently.

He started in business twenty-five years ago with a capital of $500. Today he is in comfortable circumstances and doing a larger business than at any time during his experience.

Merchants like this man make the home town the most valuable asset in the community. A good home town enhances the value of every acre of land in the vicinity; it makes every farm to the farmer a source of pride. The home town is the best investment a farming community can have and it only requires the good will and co-operation of the business men and the farmers to make it pay big dividends, socially and financially, to every family in the community, both town and country.

Why We Took Over Corfu

A Greek merchant residing in Great Britain writes to remind people that Corfu was given as a present to Greece by Great Britain, with other Ionian islands, but there was a distinct condition attached to the occupation by Greece in the Treaty of 1867, and that was that the dynasty must not walk rough shod over the Constitution of the country.

The monarchy of Greece, in short, was to be a Constitutional one. It had not been that during 1915 when it had been an absolute monarchy. The Treaty guaranteed the independence of Greece as a Constitutional monarchy, and having given that guarantee, the guarantors were under a perfect right to see that the Constitutional government was not violated by the king.

That Constitution had been violated by holding no elections in a year, and by the unconstitutional dismissal of the last ministry, and therefore the guaranteeing powers had the right to interfere.

Waste in Forest Protection

Because of lack of field supervision, more money is wasted in fire protection today than is used economically. Fire wardens are nearly all temporary men, and if one does not give them supervision and training, and does not try to keep the good men from year to year, one cannot get the results desired. In the first fire protection service of Canada, the fire wardens were wasting money that were making good use of it. Unless we have good permanent supervision of fire protection and have the same men as permanent rangers year after year we will not get the good results because we have large areas to protect with very small sums of money. McMillan.

Barley or Oats First

"I know that a number of farmers think that should come before barley in the order of spring seeding," said Prof. C. A. Zavitz. "In my experience, however, the earliest seeding of barley is invariably the best. It gives the best yields. It has not always been so with oats. Still, if the land is low and wet I would not sow barley there very early. I have seen barley so sown with frost that it turned yellow, but still it gave a good yield."

"How did the snowstorm affect the train service out your way?" "Didn't affect it at all. It merely gave the company a good excuse for the trains being as late as usual."

Grim determination to fight the war to the bitter end and a calm confidence in its successful outcome in England's present state of mind, according to Lewellyn A. Nares of Fresno, Cal., who reached New York recently.

He was in Liverpool on the night of the central council's raid, as is known, on Feb. 1, though they reached neither Liverpool nor Manchester, as the Germans asserted they did.

"The damage they done was confined to a small brewery," he said, "and a few little cottages and homes in which the casualties occurred. No one seemed at all excited about the raid. When the word was flashed from the coast that the 'Zepps' were coming the cities and towns gave the usual signals, and every one expected the many curious look over. You know they lower the lights for about ten minutes and then flash them on again for a time, and the people go to their homes and wait in the safest places. Then, of course, trains and trams were stopped while the raid was in progress, and as soon as the alarm came near my town all the lights were put out. I was in Liverpool on the night of the raid and did not hear anything about it until next day."

"I found business conditions in England very good, except for the shortage of labor. For the first time in years, every one is doing his share of the work and all the work they can do. And what is more every one is working. All the women, of the high and low degrees, are employed. Every man, woman or child is doing his or her bit. A remarkable feature of the present economic life in England is the number of women who are working at trades that used to employ men exclusively. There are thousands of them in the munition plants in England, as they are capable of handling the finest tools and machinery of the world. All England is adjusting itself to the new conditions and making the best of them."

"For the first time in years, also, there is no suffering among the poor. In fact, there are now no poor. The shortage of labor makes every hand available and the families who four or five pounds a month used to be the income, they now received from thirty to forty. Of course, this leads to extravagance in many cases, but it is not uncommon for these families to buy pianos and other luxuries where before the war they were thankful to get enough to eat."

"I had occasion to meet a number of what we would call 'big business men' and others intimately connected with the work being done for the empire, and they assured me that the recruiting was all that could be desired."

"Everywhere I went I found all the open places filled with soldiers. All the parks, golf courses, playgrounds, and schoolyards were being used, and I heard it said several times that the full 4,000,000 men required had been obtained."

"One of the reasons that Englishmen are so confident about the outcome of the war is that perfect co-operation has been established among the allies. They are practically one great nation, united in purpose and action, and they are receiving things they need from the French and Russians, to say nothing of the Italians, and from the other hand, get their necessities from England. There is perfect co-operation in the making of munitions, the making of munitions, the supplying of the armies, and, best of all, at the front where the real work of the war is being done."

"I found England making preparations for the reconstruction period after the war. The Manchester board of trade at its annual meeting practically decided to abandon the principles of Cobden and give up free trade. It decided to fight for a tariff that would exclude German goods from the United Kingdom after the war, and this is the sentiment all over England."

"It is felt universally in Great Britain that the empire is fighting the fight of democracy, and all classes are taking the war with philosophy and a grim determination to fight to the bitter end. Several examples of this feeling came to my direct notice. At a board meeting of the Manchester board of trade, the chairman was called out to the board room to receive a telegram. It was from London and told of the death of his nephew, a young man who was on his return to the room apologized for delaying the business of the moment by saying that he had been notified of his nephew's death. He then went on with the business just as though nothing had happened, although I could see the lines tighten about his square mouth and that is the spirit of the English."

Employer—Boy, take this letter and wait for an answer.
New Boy—Yes, sir.
Employer—Well, what are you waiting for?
New Boy—The answer, sir.

People are getting too careless in starting fires without having the necessary fire protection.

Anyone starting a fire without having this protection, is liable to a fine, besides paying for any loss from the fire.

If one or two were made an example of, perhaps there would be more care taken in the future.
